A NEW ANÆSTHETIC.-We have sometimes thought that a spark of divine inspiration must have been vouchsafed to the man who first discovered the anæ-thetic properties of sulphuric ether. Should the grateful millions whose sufferings have been assuaged by the precious boon desire to erect a monument to his memory, they might find it difficult to determine whose name should be engraved on the | quality; prices low, at marble shaft. England and America each contend for the honor of having given birth to the immortal benefactor, and a multitude of doctors on both sides of the ocean have disputed as to who should wear the palm. As far as we know, the controversy has not been decided to this day. Boston has set up the statue of one of its own doctors, but a large body of the medical faculty claim that the chaplet should be worn by another.

Since then, however, new agents producing similar results have been discovered, and their use is more or less associated with the names of the first bold experimenters who dared to try their effects both upon themselves and their patients. Chloroform and nitrous oxide gas are the best known anæsthetics. The inhaling of the former has always been supposed to be attended with more or less danger, but the per centage of deaths from its use is so small (one in sixteen thousand cases, according to some authorities.) that few patients refuse to take it when a painful surgical operation is about to at low prices. be performed. There are said to be two or three cases on record where persons have died while under the influence of nitrous oxide gas, but considering the thousands who take it every day, as administered by dentists, without experiencing the least sickne's or unpleasant sensation, it may be considered harmless. It has coupl tely disarmed tooth pulling of all its ter-

Dr. Richardson, of London, has been investigating a new anæ-thetic, to which he has the special attention of country merchants, as given the name of hydramyl. An account of | they will be sold very low for money. his experiments is given in the "Ha f yearly Compendium of Medical Science, Part IX.," (just published) which will be found interest ing reading, even to those who never expect to un lergo any more painful surgical operation than the dislodging of a tooth or the lancing of a boil. Dr. Richardson was in the habit of using a mixture of amyl hydride and rectified ether for producing local anæsthesia; that is, by freezing the spot through which the incision is to be made by the rapid evaporation of old ladies, at the volatile sub-tance spurted upon it in the form of spray. He noticed that when the soray form of spray. He noticed that when the spray was used for an operation about the nose or mouth the patient often passed into a state of wADDEY'S, 74 King street. mouth the patient often passed into a state of duced was so gentle, so deep, and yet so temporary that De Richard on middle the porary the porary that De Richard on middle the porary that De Richard on midd porary, that Dr. Richardson rightly supposed that he was on the track of a most valu- PHONOGRAPHY. able discovery. He forthwith began a series of experiments in order to ascertain whether it was the vapor of the ether or of hydride which produced the insensibility, and it was not long till he assured himself that it was the latter. When inhaled it sibility to pain, and leaves the consciousness comparatively unimpaired.

Dr. Richardson has also been experimenting with methylic ether. In several cases the patients, although quite insensible to pain, were able to obey every request made of them, and some of them kept insisting that they were not yet ready for the operation because they were entirely conscious, whereas the cutting was going on all the time and they felt it not. Oue lady took the anæsthetic and then pointed out successively the teeth which she wished to have extracted, adjusting herself in the chair after each tooth was drawn, and yet felt no pain whatever. From this and other cases which came under his notice the Dictor very fairly assumes that "in the course of time we shall discover manageable and certain anæsthetic substances which will paralyze sensation only, leaving the muscular power unaltered and the mental little disturbed."—Baltimore

A TOOTHACHE STORY .- A Cincinnati dentist, who had become nervous by frequent burglaries in his vicinity, was somewhat startled recently by having a man come daily at the same hour each evening and sit on his doorstep. He finally suggested that if it would be all the same to him he would be pleased to have him divide his attentions and sit on some neighbor's doorstep awhile. "But it wouldn't be the same," shouted the visitor in return, "nor anything like it. You are a dentist and I have an infernal aching tooth that I have at the courage to have pulled. I come here every afternoon trying to make up my mind to have it out and as soon as I come in sight of your house it stops aching and as long as I sit on your doorstep where the confounded thing knows it can get pulled if it gives trouble I have some rest. Now if you want me to go to another dentist, I will." "Oh, no," was the reply, "under I will." those circumstances stay by all means, my
